

A Place for Learning

As part of its mission, the LSU AgCenter provides educational opportunities at the Botanic Gardens at Burden, 440 acres of green space in the heart of Baton Rouge. For example, Burden Horticulture Society volunteers lead the nationally acclaimed Project Learning Tree children's program that meets or exceeds state and national academic standards. Students learn environmental content correlated to grade-level expectations.

With Project Learning Tree's rapid growth, the Botanic Gardens' need for a dedicated outdoor classroom is great. Having a pavilion and restroom facility with year-round accessibility will help the Botanic Gardens fulfill its educational mission by enabling expansion of community education for people of all ages – such as, scouting groups, 4-H clubs, hiking clubs, bird watchers, and ecology, wetlands, conservation and urban forestry groups. Part of the LSU AgCenter Botanic Gardens' master plan, the pavilion can serve generations to come, with your support.

With your help, we can

- Educate current and future generations about Louisiana's ecosystem and preservation of urban forests.
- Instill an appreciation for nature and conservation of natural resources.
- Promote active, healthy lifestyles.
- Provide interactive learning opportunities.
- Develop environmentally conscious leaders.
